

Skeletons.

Every politician and candidate has them, and it is time for me to come clean with mine. Here it goes....

Skeleton #1: I graduated Magna Cum Laude from college.

Skeleton #2: I graduated Cum Laude from law school.

Skeleton #3: I won a National Award for my pro bono legal services, the only sole proprietor woman in the country to receive the award.

Skeleton #4: I was named a Top Woman of Law in Massachusetts in 2011.

Skeleton #5: I am self-made. I built a successful law practice from nothing--no connections, no big checks from Mom, Dad, or family.

Skeleton #6: I fight against the Federal government and win when people's lives and businesses and jobs are on the line.

Skeleton #7: I was a varsity cheerleader in High School.

You get the picture. I have a track record of success and delivering results in the fights that I take on-send me to Congress to fight and win for you.

It is time for politics to actually bring real solutions to the people. Sending the same career politicians back to DC year after year will change nothing. Politicians seem to have forgotten that their job is to improve the lives of hardworking people.

Have you had a raise lately? Congress has. Have you ever failed to show up for your job 3 weeks in a row and kept your job? Congress has. Can you do nothing at your job and remain employed? Congress can. Let's tell them Congress can't.

Are you happy paying taxes to watch Congress do nothing to help us hardworking people out here? I'm not, and that is why I am in this race.

It is up to us. I know that if we elect people who know how to get things done, we will find real world solutions and succeed. Please join me today.

Thank you for your support,
Marisa

P.S. I threw in the cheerleading one for fun-some people may think it is a skeleton...but either way, we were County champions. I delivered my best for my team, and I will do the same for you.
